

Students using Word Processor

In class, students were studying about the sun and the different things it does for our Earth. After prewriting and drafting their ideas, students typed out their reports using the word processor. Students practiced writing sentences and using correct capitalization, spacing, and punctuation. While doing this, students were also strengthening their computer skills, such as typing, maneuvering the mouse, picking different fonts, and printing. Below are pictures of some of the students completing this activity.

This is the final product of the students' reports. The next step of working on the word processor is searching and inserting a picture.
